Assignment 4

For Assignment 4, I continued on updating my Bun Bun Bake Shop website from Assignment 3. My changed files are:

- Shopping Cart Page - linked to main2.js
- Product Description Page (For Original Vegan Bun) - linked to main.js

Challenges

During this assignment, my biggest challenge was not fully understanding how different kinds of files, local storage, classes and ids talked to each other until I was well into the assignment. It caused many bugs that I had to go back and spend a long time fixing. I also think having the second Javascript lab helped me a lot. Without it I wouldn't have been able to finish the assignment.

One other problem that I encountered was solved by having two separate Javascript files that managed different html files.

Bugs

Most of the bugs I encountered during this assignment was related to the `"$(document).ready(function() {})"`. My first issue was not including it at all. Then I realized that it lacked a `)`. The last bug was related to having an event listener out of the the function. Even though I was conceptually aware of what I had to do, checking the location of the functions in the document was not intuitive, especially in Sublime Text.

Design Choices & Feedback

I didn't update my design because it received mostly positive feedback. One update I made was to add guidance (i.e. an example of what to write) to the customization input field. One other feedback I received was maybe to change the orientation of the second menu in the product list page. However, I chose not to use that feedback because I think the horizontal menu repeats the orientation of the menu bar to create a more cohesive navigation experience.

I did update my code according to the notes. I moved all my styling from my html files to the css file, I replaced all the `"_"` with `"-"`, used `"` instead of `'` and finally tried to use more explicit id and class names.

Pictures

During the project I used the photos that I found online with Creative Commons licenses. The links to each photo is listed below.
